

1,000 TECH STUDENTS IN MERRY RIOT

Kidnap, Firemen Night Watchman at Eastern School; No One Hurt

FIRES ARE STARTED

Spirit of Fun Thought Cause of Action

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 18.—

Apparently for no other reason than a spirit of fun, about 1,000 students, clad in pajamas and slippers, late last night and early today staged a wild riot on the campus at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, setting three bonfires, kidnapping the night watchman and three firemen, hurling laboratory bombs and doing damage of several thousand dollars on the new quadrangle.

The students, yelling college cheers, poured streams of water from dormitory windows, hurled firecrackers from the roof tops, made off with a nozzle of the fire department, and staged an impromptu tug of war with firemen, using a hose as a rope.

NO INJURIES

The excitement was marked by no serious injuries.

The firemen were outnumbered, the hose wrenched from their grasp, and turned on them full blast. Captain William C. Richardson of the Cambridge fire department, was the first of several fire fighters to lose his helmet to trophy seekers.

Police were called to quell the demonstration, but were powerless to halt the proceedings, amid derisive greetings of hoots and jeers. Shrubbery was torn down in the fight. Beds, mattresses, desks, chairs, tables, pillows and other dormitory fixtures, were piled high in the center of the quadrangle, and as the students yelled in unison "oh for the life of a fireman," the blaze was started.

When the fire threatened to spread to the dormitories, the fire department was called. As several pieces of apparatus arrived, the students turned their hilarious activities toward the firemen, showering them with pillows, bags filled with water and other missiles. The firemen at first ignored the barrage, and brought the fire under control.

No sooner had the first bonfire died down than a second was started in the center of the quadrangle. A little later, a third blaze was started, and the firemen, having prevented any possible spread of the flame to buildings, gathered up what was left of their hoses and other apparatus, and retired from the scene to their fire houses.

WESTERVILLE YOUTH SAVES STRICKEN MAN

Harold Scott, High School Athlete Known Here, Is Hero In Blaze

LOSS IS $30,000

Student Carries Overcome Man From Flames

WESTERVILLE, O., May 18.—Defying clouds of dense smoke that billowed out of the State Theatre here early today when fire swept the battery and generator room of the building, Harold Scott, 17-year-old high school youth, rescued Paul Brake, a theatre employee, who was overcome while attempting to save some of the movie house equipment.

Brake was revived shortly after he was carried into the open air by Scott.

One other man was injured in the confusion that attended the battle against the fire, which caused damages, mostly by water and smoke, estimated at approximately $30,000. A. D. Cursman, owner of the theatre, received a gash over his right eye when a piece of glass slashed him as a window pane fell and broke.

The fire broke out in the theatre early this morning. It was discovered when a policeman, making his beat, noticed smoke pouring from the building. The blaze was located in the battery and generator room, situated nearby the projection booth.

Local volunteer firemen brought the fire under control before the blaze itself caused much damage. Most of the loss, it was said, was done by smoke and water. Sound and projection equipment of the theatre was practically destroyed.

Origin of the blaze, according to Frank Arn, local fire chief, was probably a short in the battery room.

Harold Scott, youthful Westerville high student, has appeared against Circleville high school athletic teams a number of times in the past year. A member of the junior class, Scott played half-back on the football team here last fall, and was one of the guards on the basketball team.

SPEED HOLMAN, AIRMAN KILLED

Plane Refuses To Come Out of 'Barrel-Roll' Flyer Crashes To Ground.

OMAHA, Neb., May 18.—Whether a sudden adverse air current or a broken safety strap had caused the death of Charles W. "Speed" Holman, Minneapolis was undecided today, but 20,000 spectators at the air races here knew that Holman, always a daredevil, had "stunted" to the last.

Flying upside down at a speed estimated at close to 300 miles an hour, and close to the ground in front of the grandstand the plane suddenly crashed and became a ball of wreckage. While the crowd was still stunned, authorities ordered the other events to continue.

Some who were close enough to see said that Holman was hanging from the inverted plane and trying desperately to regain control of the craft. He had volunteered to do some stunts.

Holman won the feature race at the National Air Races at Chicago last year after gaining much notoriety with his capers in the air. He held the record for consecutive loops, having made 1,433 in 1928 over St. Paul airport.

BARBER HEADS HUGE SWINDLE, MILLIONS LOST

Hunt 'Jake the Barber' Factor In International Ring; Partners Held

LOSS 7 MILLIONS

African Mines, American Oil Involved

NEW YORK, May 18.—A swindle in which a man, who once wielded a pair of scissors in a cut-rate barber shop in Chicago, was sought today as the leader, which robbed investors of between $3,000,000 and $7,000,000, investigators said today.

John Factor, known as "Jake the Barber" and his associates, headed a bucketshop swindle which duped many English investors, according to Gerald Campbell, British general consul in New York. Factor is now sought with two of his associates already under arrest.

NATURE UNREVEALED

The exact nature of the operations of the Factor gang was not revealed but it was learned a house in London which sold stocks in South African mining and American oil companies was involved. Campbell said most investors were persons of limited means. The Broad Street Press, Ltd., in London, was involved in the losses or connected with the operations of the swindle in some manner, the consul said.

"I am sorry any information leaked out before Factor was arrested," Campbell said.

Harry Geen, arrested by department of justice agents in a fashionable apartment in Germantown, Pa., was said by Campbell to have been Factor's secretary. Arthur J. Klein, alias Harry Kline, was detained by federal authorities here when he attempted to disembark from a ship last December and has since been held in the federal house of detention.

Geen, alias Gallon, is a British subject, 31 years old, and has lived in New Orleans, Miami, Los Angeles, Chicago and New York, according to police.

Klein, who has been refused bail here, had cabled $1,200,000 to be deposited with a firm on Wall Street before he left England, according to Edward H. Lockwood, attorney for the British consulate here. It was understood the money was impounded at the request of British authorities.

Consul Campbell said that he believed losses sustained by the victims of Factor and his associates would exceed $3,000,000, while estimates made in Chicago and Philadelphia placed the victims' losses as high as $7,000,000.

WON GAMBLING

In December, 1928, Factor was reported to have made a huge winning at baccarat at Cannes, France, playing opposite Nicholas Zographos, the Greek syndicate backing the Casino, Factor was said to have won $480,000. Another time he was reported to have won $30,000 at Roulette in Le Touquet.

A Chicago firm was reported to have placed Factor's credit with them at $1,500,000.

Factor was described as a young man, always well dressed and with a "poker face" countenance.

Let's Clean The Poles

Circleville is a fine town to live in. Circleville's residential sections present a pleasing and lasting impression to the tourists who motor through the city.

But what about the business section with its unsightly poles, made more unsightly by being covered with placards and battered signs that offend public taste?

Everybody loves beauty . . . but certainly they cannot be impressed with the appearance of the poles that have been used as Billboards.

This can be remedied if this useful ordinance is enforced:

Sec. 164 of Revised Ordinances states, in part; "And it shall be unlawful for any persons to nail, stick or paste, or in any other manner, to attach any sign, notice, bill, placard or advertising of any description upon any pole of any company herebefore referred to in this section. Any person or persons violating any of the provisions of this section shall be fined in any sum not more than ten dollars, or be imprisoned not more than ten days, or both."

During Clean-Up and Paint-Up Week would be the proper time to see that this law is enforced and these placards removed . . . and kept removed.

We would suggest that these poles then be painted, at their base, and make the business section more inviting to everyone.

Let's get this done . . . NOW!

672 PLANE HANDLED SINGLE

36 Huge Army Planes Pass Over This Saturday Afternoon

FOUR IN ACCIDENT

Single Command Hand Flying Tactics

Thirty-six army planes flying in perfect formation passed over this city at 3 p. m. Saturday. They came from the southeast after circling the city and away in the northwest, apparently heading for Dayton.

FAIRFIELD, Ark., May 18.—Of the puzzling question of military aviation was given answer here today in a demonstration work of the 8th army air corps division conducted for maneuvers.

Two days of flying and formation work found the planes handling smoothly in a squadron. Four planes were recorded but not a serious accident marred the review in history.

Two National Guards which moved over when a field wet from rain, and a military flyer suffered a mishap, but none of the planes were seriously injured. A field, Va., bomber was landed five miles north of City, Ind., when one engine failed, and slipped a landing gear, but no serious damage was done.

Capt. J. A. Gorman, of the 8th army air corps, was flying out of the formation. Another was piloted by Lieut. Dennis Mulligan, Glen Rock, N. Y., and a passenger, Sergeant J. B. O'Brien, of Brooklyn, N. Y., both of whom were killed.

Kirby of Selridge, Ind., was flying the regular maneuver which turned the planes in a loop. Lieut. L. F. Harman of the 1st field force, was flying the maneuver.

These four mishaps, totaling the 200,000 spectators thronged highways and parking hills and fences to watch the maneuvers were the net casualties. Dozens of hours of radio flying of more than a half and American army staff officers expressed the opinion the feat could not be equaled by any nation in the world.

FOULDES GIVEN PRISON They swept past the grandstand in a column of 36, motors throbbing a 300-hour speed. That's all, phantoms that passed 2400 ft. was recruited from units sent out at intervals over distant points, ordered into parade formation.

A single hooded figure of a pilot radio station controller, a whole giant outfit. Orders movements from Brigadier General Benjamin D. Foulde, commander of the division, were spoken into a tiny transmitter. Fairfield, and each then an expert out the unit commander picked it up instantly and responded back an "Ok, order received."

LEGAL NEWS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF NEW CRIMINAL CODE

Constitutionality of that provision of the new criminal code which permits amending indictments during trial was defended in the Ohio Supreme Court this week by Gilbert Bettman, Attorney General, and Joseph A. C. Gown, special counsel on his staff. The question arose in the case of State versus David Breinig.

Breinig, who was superintendent of maintenance and repair of state highways in Scioto-co, was indicted for embezzlement.

On the second day of trial, Breinig's lawyers found that the words "in the county of Scioto aforesaid" had been omitted from the indictment and moved to strike out all the evidence already offered, asking the court to direct a verdict of not guilty. The Attorney General moved to amend the indictment, which leave was granted. The court holding that section 13487-29 of the new criminal code specifically authorizes the amendment of indictments during trial, statute under which the amendment was made violated two provisions of Section 10, Article 1 of the Ohio Constitution. Decision of the supreme court has not yet been given.

ROMANCE OF RECORDS

Examination of the title to land in Franklin-twp, Ross-co, by Gilbert Bettman, Attorney General, for the state department of agriculture, which proposed to buy the land for reforestation purposes, revealed the following story:

That the land was owned originally by one Governor Duncan McArthur and that by his will, Governor McArthur devised the land to trustees, the income there-of to be distributed equally among his children during their lives. He provided that on the death of his children the land should be parcelled among the grandchildren.

However, the children of the Governor became impatient and a little greedy, as children will, and in 1839 brought suit to set the will aside. Their suit was successful and the land was divided among the children rather than among the grandchildren of the original owner. What became of the spirit of sacrifice usually attributed to parents where their children are concerned, the record does not disclose.

In the years which followed the division of land, five grandchildren were born into the family. After the youngest of these had reached the age of 21, they decided that their parents had conspired to defeat their rights, and brought suit to have the trust declared in existence. They carried their case to the United States Supreme Court and were there sustained in spite of the fact that the rights of many innocent purchasers would be defeated.

In the meantime, the son of the Governor who had acquired the particular strip of land in question had lost it to his creditors by levy of execution.

NO FINANCIAL INTEREST

Gilbert Bettman, Attorney General, has held that a contract may legally be made between the son of a member of the board of education and the board for the transportation of pupils to and from school in rural districts, where the son is over 21 years of age, and the father has no financial interest in the contract.

CANT INTERFERE WITH STATE

In his capacity as lawyer for the state highway department, Gilbert Bettman, Attorney General, was successful in securing a permanent injunction in the Lawrence-co court of common pleas, restraining Joseph H. VACCINATION OF INDIGENT

Vaccination of children of indigent parents may be paid for by township trustees only when the board of education has previously made application to the trustees for such assistance, Attorney General Gilbert Bettman held in an opinion rendered to Joseph J. Labadie, prosecutor of Putnam-co.

RE-SELLING OF CEMETERY LOTS

In an opinion to Raymond E. Ladd, prosecutor of Wood-co, Attorney General Gilbert Bettman held that a board of township trustees may adopt rules and regulations controlling the sale of cemetery lots to persons who are non-residents of the township, and incorporate in deeds to the lots such rules and regulations.

Ladd's inquiry set forth the fact that cemetery lots in one township were available to residents for as little as $10, while non-residents were charged from $75 to $100. Because residents were buying the lots and selling them to non-residents, township trustees wished to know whether they could put restrictions in the deeds. General Bettman held that this might be done.

IS THERE HELP FOR THOSE AFFLICTED WITH COLITIS?

Although formerly regarded by many, and perhaps still by some, as an incurable disease, it is now known that COLITIS may yield to the application of the efficient methods which modern scientific research has supplied. Discoveries made in the Pasteur Institute, of Paris, first called attention to the highly dangerous character of the poisons commonly found in the colon and to the insidious mischiefs to which these poisons may give rise.

Cleaning out these poisons by mechanical means brings about astonishing results. So much so, that we designed special apparatus for the purpose of cleaning out the colon and it is surprising the amount of accumulated poisons which we get rid of through colonic irrigations.

Our experience shows that cases, which failed to respond to all other forms of treatment, will yield readily once the accumulations of months and sometimes years, have been cleaned out.

We find also that to get the best results a very complete and special technic has to be used. An ordinary enema and ordinary syringing is of no lasting help whatsoever. In fact, we find that every case presents its own needs and has to be worked out accordingly. Various solutions have been devised to fit the varying conditions. The position of the patient in getting the treatment is of great importance. The rapidity of the treatment or its comparative slowness and many other factors enter into the technic of Colonic Therapy to make it effective.

But—the results are astonishing. We are finding out that the effects, if followed up with proper dietetic measures, are lasting. Most of the patient treated colonically have accumulations develop over a period of months and sometimes years and it stands to reason, particularly with proper living methods, that these treatments will prove lasting once the poisonous accumulations have been dissolved and discharged. And even though an occasional treatment of this kind be taken afterward, it is at once the most natural, the easiest, and the best method for staying well.

SENATOR IN MOVIE

HONOLULU, T. H.—The lot of a "movie extra" fell to U. S. Senator A. H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, while sitting in a hotel lobby here.

During the filming of a picture, a few scenes were being made in a local hotel. The senator, talking with a friend, was included in one of the scenes. When he noticed the incident, he started to leave but was halted by the director. "Wait a minute, Senator," for the director. "You're in my picture now, and will have to stay while I shoot by other angles." The Senator obligingly complied.

THE average age of the survivors according to Miss Lida S. Lucas, of Columbus, department secretary, is 86 1-2 years.

Although it is probably that only a few more G. A. R. encampments can be held, the final meetings are proving far more auspicious than the first, leaders declare.

In fact, little is known of the first 14 years of the organization's history. That it was formed in 1866 appears certain, but all the records of activities until 1880 have been lost or destroyed.

No. 1 post was assigned to Carrollton, the home of General B. F. Potts, who was appointed provisional commander of the department and began the organization of other posts. Post No. 2 was established at Zanesville.

When the convention met in Columbus to form a permanent department in 1887, General Potts was able to report that 130 posts had been chartered.

Only 88 delegates attended the first encampment.

A serious decline in the organization commenced about 1873 and by 1875 only eight posts remained, although there had been 19 two years before.

For several years after the slump in the organization's history, Ohio was represented by only two delegates at the national encampment.

About 1880, however, the Ohio organization found new life and enthusiasm and by 1890 it had 738 posts and 49,011 members.

Since that year, however, deaths among members have constantly reduced the roll of veterans, and the fear that the last encampment will soon be held grows greater each year.

PRESENT DAY RELIGION WILL BE DISCUSSED AT CONVENTION

COLUMBUS, O.—“Present day” religion, not the theology of the golden past, but the credo of busy twentieth century will be discussed at the annual convention of the Ohio Council of Religious Education which will be held here May 15 to 18.

Religious leaders from all over the state will be attracted to the convention, which, according to Dr. D. Clippinger, president of the Ohio Council of Religious Education, will be one of the most important in the 72 years of the organization's history.

Although leaders have not yet decided in detail how they will differentiate between religion of today and the religion of a few centuries ago, it is known that religious education through schools and Sunday schools are springing up everywhere, Dr. Clippinger predicted that the convention here will show a “great expansion from the original idea of religious education.”

Organized work of the council in the state will be presented during departmental conferences.

Newer plans of educational promotion, like those being carried out by a handful of leaders in a few communities, will be discussed.

Judge Florence Allen of the Ohio Supreme Court, will discuss that possibility of religion in an address on “Christianity, the Principal Basis of World Peace.”

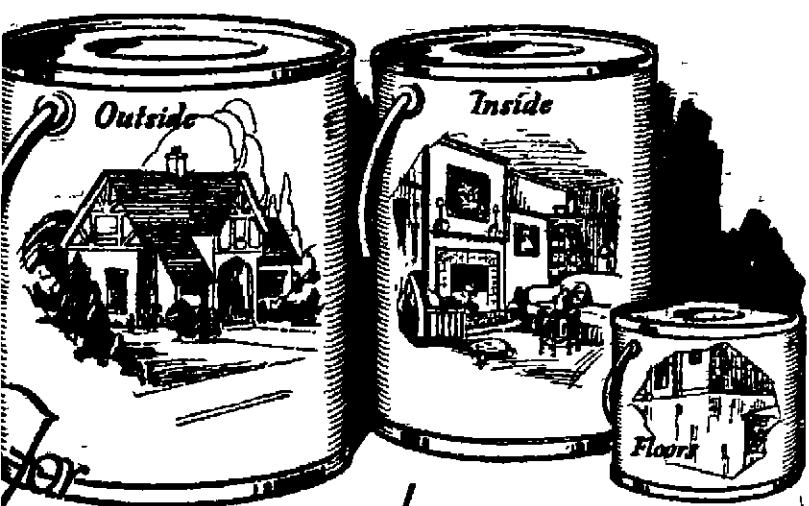

Prohibition will not be forgotten, according to advance notices one of the subjects for seminary study on the tentative program being, “The Educational Approach to the Problem of Prohibition and Law Enforcement.”

Special emphasis will be directed to problems of the younger generation.

Needs of training for parents and adults as well as children also will be taken up. Church loyalty among adults will be urged in another seminar.

The convention will be held principally for persons interested in religious education through schools and Sunday schools.

Eighteen Ohio Protestant denominations, representing 8,000 Sunday schools and a million and a quarter Sunday School scholars, are cooperating with the council in its work.

FOREMEN MEET

DAYTON, O.—Eight hundred members of the National Association of Foremen, determined to find a way of turning out better products at lower costs, will hold their annual convention here June 12 and 13.

The cost of production will be the principal theme of discussion at the meeting.

“What should the foremen teach their workers about cost?” will be asked and answered by G. F. Buxton of Purdue University, in one of the principal addresses of the convention.

Means of inspiring workers to greater production through wage adjustment will be discussed by H. H. Flagg of Detroit, a representative of the General Motors Corporation.

A. D. Lynch of the Ohio Brass Co., at Mansfield, well known convention speaker, also will appear on the program. His topic will be “A Simple Discussion of Costs.”

Walter E. Blank, president of the Dayton Foremen's Club, is in charge of arrangements for the convention here. W. J. Donkel, national president, will preside at all regular sessions.

Wise Sanitary Regulations

The Egyptians filtered the water of the Nile, and the Chinese in remote ages clarified their water supply. Joseph's well, near Gizeh, driven through 300 feet of solid rock, is a model for obtaining purity. The Roman aqueducts, tapping mountain streams for a city population, are later examples. Ventilation was another Roman hobby. The soundness of Moses' health regulations, adopted into the moral code, is confirmed by present-day theories.

Species of Squirrel

“Flickertail” is the name given to the Richardson ground squirrel. They are a species of squirrel and are called flickertails from their habit of flipping or flicking their tails. North Dakota is nicknamed the Flickertail state because of the abundance of these ground squirrels in that region.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Many Educators At Inauguration

OXFORD, O.—Inauguration of Dr. Ralph K. Hickok as the sixth president of the Western College for women here Tuesday, May 19, is expected to bring together one of the most notable groups of educators ever assembled in this section for many years.

Representatives of nearly 300 colleges, universities, educational societies and foundations have accepted invitations to attend the event, which will be marked with all the solemn beauty connected academic life.

One of the features of the inauguration will be the procession, starting at Peabody Hall, the main college building, and continuing along the winding roads surrounding the institution to Pressor Hall.

All of the visiting delegations, the trustees of Western, the faculty and officials will participate in the inaugural procession, it is planned.

The inaugural itself will take place in Pressor Hall. Richard P. Ernst, former United States Senator from Kentucky, and President of the Western board of trustees, will preside and formally pronounce Dr. Hickok as the president.

Following this ceremony, greetings will be extended to the new officer and to the delegates by Dr. A. H. Upham, president of Miami University, Oxford. A response will be tendered by Kett D. MacMillan, president of Wells.

Dr. Hickok will then deliver his inaugural address.

A luncheon will be held in honor of the college's new “prexy” following the inaugural ceremonies.

Any member of the family of R. L. Brehmer, 581 N. Court-st. is invited to be a guest of The Herald to the Grand Theatre. Call at this office for ticket.

ENAMEL IT—and USE it on the PORCH

Wise home owners can practice a thousand and one interesting little economies, if they have the imagination—and are willing to buy a brush and a can of paint, varnish, enamel, or brushing lacquer.

Articles of furniture, which seem to have outlived their period of usefulness because they look “old,” can be brought back to their original state by a modest amount of personal effort. What of the old chair—perhaps kitchen chairs that are an eyesore? A coat of shining enamel will make them as pretty as these you see in the modern tea shops, and the side veranda or the front porch, during the summer months, can boast a new attraction.

These enamel and brushing lacquers are not difficult to apply. Let us tell you about them.

RESULTS SEEN

MILLERSBURG, O.—After a modest beginning Holmes County Agricultural Agent A. L. Sorensen is beginning to see the results of the state's first organized attempt to direct a county wide extension forestry program through education facilities of the schools.

Thirty-five members of the Holmes county 4-H forestry club last year planted 30,000 trees and collected more than 100 bushels of black walnut seeds, according to a report just compiled by Sorensen.

Because it will be more extensive, this year's program is expected to show the results even more complimentary.

Forest lectures, illustrated with motion pictures, were recently given in rural schools of the county. Actual demonstrations of tree planting were included. With the aid of school authorities, Sorensen expects to have the entire county student population enthusiastic about the work.

Evolution in Industry

NO great industry of the past or present has ever demonstrated a capacity to ignore successfully over any considerable period the newer competition.

The railroads are a case in point. For years these carriers were perfectly satisfied to rest on the presumption that they represented the last word in transportation and that they had nothing to fear in the way of competition. It was not until the motor bus appeared to carry off the cream of their short-haul business that the railroads realized that they were not, after all, "just in the railroad business," but were in the transportation business. Realization of this resulted in the adoption by them of their own buses where the latter were found to be cheaper and equally or more efficient.

Invention and industrial research are making manufacturing and transportation highly precarious business. Production of a better product by a competitor may deprive the manufacturer of his market almost overnight. Whole industries were forced out of business or into the manufacture of new products when the automobile replaced the buggy, and again when the radio replaced numerous musical instruments.

Sentenced to Church

It has become quite common for well-meaning judges to "sentence" idlers to work and small offenders to join the Boy Scouts, or to attend church or Sunday school or to attend a citizens' military training camp.

There is, and could be, no legal authority for such sentences, and the only reason they stand is because misdeeds of men who thus escape imprisonment or a fine are not so indiscreet as to test the question in the courts.

Jurists imposing these uplift sentences act on the theory that the "sentences" may reform the defendant. It probably never enters their minds that they are using the threat of imprisonment to drive people into church or similar environment.

Here and there an unlucky culprit actually would be affected favorably by his unaccustomed environment, but more likely the victim would look upon the institution into which he was "sentenced" as something designed for punishment of offenders against criminal law.

One may be punished by force, but he cannot be given a good character by force. Force breeds rebellion.

Servants of the Public

THE great army of federal employees rarely gets attention. It has no bands, no parades. Its members wear no uniforms to distinguish them from other men and women on the street. Yet it is a real army, several hundred thousand strong. Its members are faithful public servants, reasonably hard working and for the most part unaffected by passing scandals.

Conditions in the federal civil service are still short of the ideal. Veteran preference continues to present a difficult problem. The recent retirement act should be generous in the case of some of the workers, and federal employees who have been unemployed for recent years, are far from satisfied.

Success never resents paying a fair wage to a government employee. A pension upon retirement is a reason for being content. It is because the government is so generous that it has been able to attract the best of the nation's talent.

HIS FIRST DRIVE ALONE

"MURDER AT EAGLE'S NEST"

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XLVII.

"HOW would I know?" Bob replied irritably. "A woman in a white dress—that's how I saw her—the white dress—for she was half way across the grounds and it was dark. Seemed to be sneaking along. I stood there and I saw her sneak up to the back of the Summer house as if she was watching someone. There's vines or something, and they almost hid her. But she came out and went around to the other side; I saw her white dress on the other side of the house. Then she yelled something, it sounded like, 'That's enough and I heard a shot.'"

"Sure it was a shot?"

"Of course, I've heard plenty of shooting."

"What did she do then?"

"I don't know. I didn't see her again. I ran across the lawn and she was gone. I looked inside and saw the woman on the floor."

There was a long pause, broken only by Millicent's sobbing, while the sick eyes stared at them all.

"I was going to call someone," Bob Trent went on at length. "Don't know why I didn't. Guess I must have been out of my head. What I did was come up here and grab a sheet out of the bundle of laundry on the porch. I took it back and covered her up. Then I got the car turned around and came home. That's all."

The too bright eyes closed; he seemed to lapse into stupor.

Against Time

After a time, the others went into the little room and Millicent wept out an apology for pilfering the cigarette lighter.

"You see I was afraid to have Bob tell me. I didn't mean to tell you. I thought I would give them something to think about till they'd found the right one. Oh, what will become of us?"

Walter tried to reassure her but his voice sounded flat. And all at once Bob knew that Walter did not quite believe Bob Trent's story and that Reynolds did not believe it at all. She knew it was this—underlying suspicion of Bob Trent in Walter's mind—which accounted for his lack of definite action, his following false clues. He had been trying to shield the sick man, this broken hero they all loved, hoping something would turn up to substantiate his faith in the man who was always between fact and duty.

She loved Walter for it. It came to her that this moment of sudden knowledge had brought her a first realization of what love actually was.

In the shadows of the porch she saw Fred Burke, and knew all too well what his presence meant. Millicent was waiting at the station house. A white and shaking Imogene, though her lips were pulled into a faint, malicious smile. Bob did not know who she had followed the officers back since it was plain Walter did not wish her to, but now she was glad she had come. She was hoping against hope that something would happen before tomorrow morning, something which would save Bob from the arrest that Walter would be able to delay no longer.

She saw Walter give the girl a nod and watched Imogene attempt one of her flirtatious glances at him and at Reynolds.

"I suppose you've remembered something else?" Walter asked.

"Anybody can forget things." "If they try hard enough. Bad memory gets people into trouble, young lady."

"But you wouldn't let me get into trouble, would you, Mr. Vance? Not when you hear what it is I'm going to tell you?"

"All right, Imogene, hurry on."

A Woman Scorned

The girl drew a breath and Bim saw the look of malice twist across her face again. She waited a moment and then spoke with dramatic clearness.

"I know who the man was the Baroness met in the garden."

"What?" Walter came to his feet. "You knew this and didn't tell?"

"I'm telling now, ain't I? Oh, sure, I suppose you'll make a racket." She seemed frightened all at once—frightened and unsure of herself. Bim wondered if she had acted hastily in coming here and was beginning to repent. Realizing in some strange way what was coming, Bim was more interested in Imogene now than in what she meant to say.

"I'm sorry," the maid continued more soberly. "Guess I didn't know how you'd feel about it. Anyway the man didn't have nothing to do with the murder."

"How do you know that?" Walter snapped.

"Because I seen him go out and I seen him come in and the murder was afterward. Anyway, he was in before 12 o'clock. The man," Imogene stated, "was Mr. Dole."

"Ah, the philanthropist Mr. Dole," observed Reynolds with elaborate sarcasm.

The sarcasm was lost on Imogene but not the implication, which seemed to throw her into fury. "You said it," she spluttered. "It's this one and that one with him and true to nobody, that's what. We'll see can he go around telling lies to decent, hard-working girls."

"Dole been lying to you, Imogene?"

"Well, I don't care nothing about that. I'm through with him. What I want is justice done; that's all." She muttered in a way which indicated that this was by no means all she wanted. "Well, it's like I was telling you before. Mrs. Hardy sent me out of the dressing room about eleven thirty and I went up stairs."

"You said you were asleep in ten minutes, remember?"

"Well, I wasn't. I started to undress and then I sat by the window a while—not very long. I guess. I seen the Baroness on the terrace; she was standing there like she was waiting for someone. And I seen who it was when William came from around by the kitchen. They began to talk and she took hold of his arm and they went down the path to the Summer house."

"How long were they gone?"

"Not more'n fifteen minutes. Not him, anyway. He came back then."

"He came back alone?"

"Oh, sure. Had enough of her I guess. He went up the kitchen stairs. I sat a while longer and I was undressed and in bed when I heard the clock strike midnight."

"See anyone else in the garden?"

"No, I didn't," she replied sulkily. "I didn't see anyone or anything else about the old murder, in case you maybe got to thinking I'm not on the level about this."

They asked her more questions and finally let her go. And then they sent for William Dole and he was brought in, still self-possessed, though his eyes, Bim noticed, were harassed.

He admitted the truth of Imogene's story simply, with a sort of fatalistic calm.

"I've been an awful fool," he said, stepping out of his butler character. "That's all, though—just a fool, not a murderer. When I think of her lying out there—dead—God!"

"The story goes back a long time—ten years. She wasn't a Baroness then; she was a dancer, like myself. We danced together in 'Belle of Broadway' and I fell for her as everybody else was doing, only harder. Something about her to drive one mad. We went to Paris. We danced there and in London—all around. She ditched me when she began to get famous. I—well, you couldn't blame her. I wasn't anybody much and there was no limit to where she could go. Ambitious she was. You see?"

"I didn't fall out of love with her, though. I came back here and did a little something on my own. But I kept remembering. When I thought to see her again, that's hard to understand, I guess."

Walter said harshly, "Go on."

"I read in the paper she was coming to America—coming to visit Mrs. Hardy. So I got a job as butler, since I figured I couldn't expect in any other way. Didn't expect to speak to her, you know. I just thought, 'Well, it's funny how things work out,' the illusions you carry around."

"Illusions?"

The man looked up in surprise and shook his head. "Why, yes. When I did see her I knew I'd been kidding myself all these years. I wasn't in love with her at all and had been kidding myself. When I saw her that night she looked like just another woman to me."

"You told her this?"

"Well, she wanted to stir up the old thing. I suppose. Asked me to meet her in the garden. That—" he said with a glance at Bim, "I didn't want to go, but I did. I walked down to the Summer house and sat there a few minutes. She was angry and disappointed. I left her out there. He shook himself as one might upon awakening from a bad dream. "I said I'd been a fool."

"You understand," Walter asked him, "where you're standing now?"

"Oh, I'll not try to get away, if that's what you mean. I'm willing to take whatever's coming to me, I suppose. The price of folly."

Bim felt sorry for him as he went away slowly, his head down. Had he told the truth? She would have said yes. And yet—

It was then that Chief Fury paid an unheeded of midnight visit to the station house.

Rays of Sun Help in Treatment of Sinus Ills

Baking in the Sun Is an Effective Method in Controlling This Dangerous and Painful Ailment, Says Authority, Warning Against Neglect.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

SINUS disease is one of the most prevalent and common of body disorders. Though no actual figures have been compiled, so far as I know, its prevalence at times is appalling.

At least one person in every family seems to be the victim of this complaint. What can the reason be and how can we prevent this annoyance?

Sinus disease is usually the result of neglected head colds. It often follows sore throat, ear disease, grippe, bronchitis, pneumonia or any infection of the upper air passages.

There are four pairs of cavities or sinuses found in the head. All these are accessory air passages and open into the nose. They are the frontal, the ethmoidal, the sphenoidal and the antrum, the last also called the maxillary sinus.

Answers to Health Queries

Q—What is the cause of dizziness? 2—Do you advise any treatment for falling hair?

A—Dizziness may be due to a circulatory disturbance, to an eye or ear condition, or to some intestinal disturbance. It would be wise to have your doctor give you an examination in order to determine the exact cause. 2—Yes. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

MRS. D. M. R. Q—What causes a heavy feeling in the chest, causing one to take deep breaths? 2—What should a girl of 18, 5 ft. 2 1/2 inches tall weigh, also a boy of 22, 5 ft. 9 inches tall?

A—This may be due to indigestion. 2—They should weigh respectively about 117 and 149 pounds. This is about the average weight for people of this age and height, as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is of little or no significance.

If one of these chambers becomes blocked, either by mucus or by other debris, it soon becomes infected. Then we have "sinusitis," inflammation of the sinus.

As a rule, there is severe headache and constant nasal discharge. Though the condition is not a fatal one, it is bad enough to make one's life miserable and unhappy. In addition, it lowers the vitality of the body, making it more susceptible to general infections and disease.

Sinus disease may follow infection of the root of a tooth. This is important in considering the prevention of the condition. The teeth should never be overlooked as possible causative factors.

Surgery may be indicated in some of these cases, but it should not be resorted to too quickly. Medical care and supervision in early cases of sinus disorders are usually quite enough. The chronic cases are more difficult to overcome.

If you are a sufferer from sinus disease, consult your physician. Have a careful examination—made of all your teeth and sinuses. It is best to have X-ray pictures taken. Pleasant nourishing food, fresh air and sunshine are imperative. Baking in the sun is one of the finest methods of treatment for sinus disorders. If possible, live for a time in a warm climate, above sea level and away from large bodies of water.

A—I would suggest that you have an examination so that definite advice and treatment can be outlined. This condition may be due to several different causes. The treatment depends upon the latter.

MRS. S. M. Q.—Is there any cure for trench mouth? What precaution should be taken in order to safeguard others? Is it necessary to consult a dental surgeon for advice and treatment?

A—Yes but it should have specific medical attention and advice. Have your doctor advise you. Avoid kissing and use the silverware and glasses separately in order to prevent infection. Not necessarily. Your doctor should be able to advise you. (Copyright 1939 by Universal Feature Service, Inc.)

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

TRICK OF SWALLOWING A KNIFE IS DESCRIBED

Take an ordinary table knife or a ruler and stand in front of audience. Open the mouth wide and place right hand over lower portion, as though to keep the mouth open. Then with the left hand shove the knife down the right sleeve and immediately withdraw it. With the mouth partly hidden by the right hand, it appears to the onlookers that the knife is actually being swallowed.

Justice Probes Early Ohio Law

COLUMBUS, O., —Prompted by a personal interest in the early legal lore of the Buckeye state, Chief Justice C. T. Marshall of the Ohio Supreme Court, is collecting data and relics of judicial administration which characterized the early days of the state and the Northwest Territory.

In this work, Justice Marshall, also, is inspired by a desire to add to the authentic historical collections of the Ohio State Archaeological Historical Society of which he is a member.

Responding to letters sent out by the chief justice, scores of justices the peace in all section of the state have sent him records dealing with activities of Ohio's early acquire courts. In numerous instances, ink-faded, frail-papered original writs of execution and records of cases tried in these courts have been forwarded to Chief Justice Marshall.

The first justice of the peace court in Ohio was created at Marietta on August 23, 1788. Some of the communications in the hands of the chief justice deal with official actions of justices of the peace as far back as 1833. It is hoped Judge Marshall says, that responses yet to come will throw historical light upon activities of justice courts which functioned at even earlier dates.

"There is where history is found," Chief Justice Marshall said, pointing to stack of letters already received from justices of the peace.

"It is believed that the records of the proceedings of our early Ohio courts will tell an interesting story of the habits and customs of the people as well as to give valuable information of the practice, procedure and forms employed by the early lawyers and jurists."

Action of a justice of the peace in fining persons $1.50 for failing to attend muster (apparently of Civil War soldiers) in 1863 in Highland county is referred to in one letter received by Chief Justice Marshall.

Another communication, from Justice of the peace Michael Haas of Jefferson township, Tuscarawas county, told of the collection of 10 cent interest on a note in 1858.

The unusual procedure of setting and dismissing a criminal assault case in 1862 in that township, in which John Gebb was the defendant, also is recorded.

From Justice Otto Hansel of Independence Village, Cuyahoga county, Chief Justice Marshall received the original writ calling for imprisonment in jail of a man in 1840 for debt. Hansel also forwarded the original transcript of the case of a man who in 1834 confessed judgement for debt.

"These early judicial records read like a novel, dealing with the progress of civilization," declared Judge Marshall. He plans to spend part of his summer vacation reading these early historical documents, many of which will be turned over to the archaeological and historical society for preservation to posterity.

Chief Justice Marshall said he enjoyed trips recently to Marietta and Cincinnati where he studies early judicial records. In the library of the University of Cincinnati, he browsed through documents which told of activities of court officials and sheriffs back in the days of the Northwest territory when the governor and judges constituted the law-making body—a coalition of the administrative and judicial branches of government.

At Marietta, the Chief Justice said he delved into the records of the primitive court activities in the early Ohio settlements and acquainted himself with historical landmarks. With considerable interest he traced the V-shaped boundary line in Marietta, inside of which decades ago, bonded prisoners were allowed to roam, instead of remaining in jail, until their terms, for failing to pay debts, expired.

And Wall Street His Wampum "Please tell me," begs an English tourist of the Cincinnati Enquirer, "to many of your writers commiserate the American Indian?" "Because, friend," accommodates the editor, "the white man copied his lands; the college boys his yell, and the flappers his point."

Cardinals Whip McGraw's Best

NEW YORK, May 13.—The St. Louis Cardinals are champions of the national baseball league and they looked it today—every home run they socked four circuit blasts, drove Freddie Fitzsimmons, McGraw hurling ace, from the mound and made the Giants salami clear down to the tops of their shoes. To 1, while 36,000 New Yorkers looked on with anguished eyes.

Pepper Martin and Jim Bottomley, the man nobody knew could hit, each got homers, while George Watkins, Cardinal right fielder, somewhat painted the hly by depositing himself with two four-baggers. Burleigh Grimes scored his first victory of the season and was robbed of a shutout when Johnny Verge, up from the coast league, batted in the fifth canto. Bottomley's first homer in the initial inning was the first earned run scored off Fitzsimmons in 35 innings of pitching and started the debacle that ended the New York hurler's winning streak at five games.

Driving Wes Febbell to the showers, the Athletics routed the Cleveland Indians, 15 to 10. Fox, Cochran and Simmons each poled circuiters with two men on. Haas captured the Philadelphia attack, getting five hits and scoring four runs. It was the A's ninth straight win.

The St. Louis Browns won their first 1934 game from an eastern club by turning back Washington 7 to 1 but they fell into their old ways in the night cap, which the Senators snagged 4 to 2. Gray tamed the Nationals in the opener and Brown held St. Louis to six hits in the finale.

Roy Sherid had a toothache but he gave the Detroit Tigers a pain in the neck anyway, winning 8 to 5 for the New York Yankees. Dickey, Yank catcher, batted 1000 with five clouts.

The Brooklyn Robins knocked out Papa Rixey in the eighth but it was all too late, the Cincy Reds winning 7 to 5. Frey finished the affair for the Reds. Five Robin hurlers were close to helpless.

After Earl Webb homered and threatened to win the ball game for Boston, Smead Jolly, pinch hitting for Chicago, smacked a single to score Bill Cissell and triumph for the White Sox, 2 to 1. Tommy Thomas was the winning hurler.

The Pirates pounced on Socks Seibold for three runs in the opening inning and defeated the Boston Braves, 5 to 3. Meine kept the nine Braves hits spaced.

The Cubs and Phillies were idle.

SCENE OF RYDER CUP MATCHES

Columbus Is Preparing For International Meet

When the annual Ryder Cup Team matches are played on Scioto to County Club course, Columbus, June 26-27, the leading professionals of England and the United States will find a course which is simple yet a true test of golfing mettle.

Scioto, with additional traps, four new and improved greens, all completed since the National Open was played on this historic layout in 1926, is certain to prove a test for the Ryder Cup Teams.

It is a unique type of golf course in the fact that it is not heavily burdened with sand traps. Natural rolls of the ground and rather severe rough being all that is necessary to keep the player on his mettle to score well.

The putting greens, while not heavily surrounded or overtrapped in the way of hazards, will call for reasonable accurate second shots. Nor are the greens specially troublesome, except in one or two cases in the way of undulation, but they will be found to be fast enough to require the necessary putting "touch" and very true.

ACCURATE TEES
Above all, Scioto demands long and well placed tee shots, with accurate seconds to the green.

Since the National Open was played on this Columbus course a complete fairway sprinkling system has been installed. This system assures the fairways to be in excellent condition regardless of possibilities of drought. Scioto has become famous for the class of its fairways.

The fairways are not lined or criss-crossed with artificial hazards as much as some other well-known courses, but this is more than made up for by the natural roll of the ground, and the rough which is apt to be almost as severe as sand traps.

Scioto is a right-hand course, but out of bounds is not severe. A badly sliced tee shot on either No. 2, or No. 3, or No. 12 will send the ball out of bounds. But the danger is almost negligible to a high class player, unless a strong wind is blowing. And even then it is very remote.

BIRDS JUMP TO NEAR TOP

Columbus Team Goes Into Second Berth With Double Victory Over Hens.

COLUMBUS, O., May 13.—An Ohio team in second place in the American Association? Aw, no! But it's true. The Columbus Red Birds were there today. They went up yesterday, showing the champion Louisville Colonels backward.

The other Ohio team, the Toledo Mud Hens, made the sacrifice to let the Columbusites go up. The Hens dropped a pair of 10-inning games to the Birds, 2 to 1 and 6 to 5, and fell back into seventh place.

Carl Mays, the old submarine ball expert, took a licking in the first game. In the second the Birds uncorked a 10th inning rally that netted four runs after the Hens had scored three in their half.

St. Paul stayed at the top of the league with a 6 to 2, win over Minneapolis. It was the fifth win of the year for Bett, the Saint finger.

The champion Colonels split a double-header with Indianapolis, losing the first 9 to 6 and taking the second 9 to 5.

Kansas City and Milwaukee fought a 12-inning tie in the second game of their double-header at Kansas City. The game ended in a 5 to 5 deadlock after Kansas City won the first contest, 10 to 5.

Derby's Winner Enters Belmont

By James L. Kilgallen

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 13.—Twenty Grand, Winner of the 1931 Kentucky Derby in the record time of 2:01 4-5 for the mile and a quarter, will now be groomed for the Belmont Stakes on June 13 and for any other track events in which his trainers elect to start him.

The enthroned champion of American three-year-olds has been shipped back east in a palace horse car. It was freely predicted by the rail birds at Churchill Downs that he will score another triumph in the Belmont, which is the true derby distance of one and one-half miles. When Twenty Grand finished the mile and a quarter here Saturday he was as fresh as a daisy and looked as if he could keep up his fast pace for another quarter mile without any trouble.

One of the most interesting post mortems today was the disclosure that the volume of betting at Churchill Downs was quite heavy, considering general business conditions. Well over a million dollars was poured into the mutual machines.

To be specific a total of $1,277,208 was wagered on the seven races on the Derby Day card, which compared with a total of $1,641,949. On the classic fifth race—the Derby—the sum of $499,454 was bet.

Most of the betting on Saturday was done in small amounts. The $2 and $5 windows were busy all afternoon but you never had to stand in line to get a bet down at the $10 window and $50 and $100 tickets were almost a rarity. It was said that those who patronized the $10 windows in prosperous 1928 for example were doing business at the $2 window on Saturday.

The Derby, considering the crowd, the weather and the spectacular manner in which Twenty Grand won it, was regarded as a distinct success by the management. There was a variance of opinion as regards the number of spectators that witnessed the event. Colonel Matt J. Winn, executive director of Churchill Downs, asserted it was the largest throng that ever witnessed the derby. Yet, some estimates placed the number of spectators as low as 45,000. However, most estimates ranged from 60,000 to 70,000.

Sweep All, who finished second in the derby and who is owned by Charles Fisher of Detroit, will not go east for the Belmont, it is understood. He probably will be reserved for the American Derby and the Arlington Classic.

Mate, A. C. Bostwick's famous three-year-old who came in third in the derby on Saturday, has been shipped back east. He has not as yet been nominated for the Belmont.

The scratching of Equipoise was a disappointment to his thousands of admirers. He had been a heavily played favorite in the winter books.

Elmer Rood, of Quincy, Ill., was fined $200 for using the telephone to scold his wife.

ASHVILLE DRUBBED BY NEW ALBANY 9

With neither Pettibone nor Tustin able to put more than a "prayer" on their offerings, Asheville's Suburban league ball club, took one on the nose Sunday at the hands of the New Albany aggregation. The score of the runaway was 17-7.

Both teams scored two runs in the second but in the third New Albany went into a lead with five runs that never was threatened.

The winners tallied 25 base hits, two of them home runs.

CHATS WITH NATURE

SOLANUM, THE POTATO FAMILY
By W. M. Reid

Among the great number of plants used as food in different parts of the world, none has a more interesting history than that of the potato. Its origin is undoubtedly American. The Spaniards who made the conquest of Peru, in South America are given the credit of discovering its value as a food product and introducing it into Spain. Sir Walter Raleigh took potatoes with him when in the reign of Queen Elizabeth he attempted to plant colonies along the eastern coast of North America, in what is now Virginia, and the Carolinas. He doubtless had taken potatoes from captured Spanish ships, in which exercise the English at that time were very adept. They were also introduced into England and Ireland at about the same time. The soil and climate of Ireland was so peculiarly adapted to the successful growth of potatoes because of the abundant moisture, they became a staple food for the inhabitants. In England the demand grew and many were shipped to that island and because of their coming from Ireland they received the name of Irish potatoes.

Originally potatoes were small and watery, but by selection and breeding we have the excellent varieties we enjoy today on our tables. To Burbank, the plant wizard, is given much credit for improving the quality and size of the potato.

The potato belongs to the Solanum family of plants, of which there are hundreds of species, being most numerous in the tropics. Most of these plants can be identified by the flower which is known as rotate, or wheel shaped, the petals usually in fives and the stamens so formed as to resemble the hub of a wheel.

The potato is not a root but a swelled underground stem, whose eyes, so called, are buds from which the new plants grow. The tubers have a tendency to grow at the surface of the ground and however deep they may be planted, they will always be found in this position. If exposed to the sun the tuber turns green and forms a bitter acid juice the same as in the stem and leaves. In its wild state it was reproduced from its seed as well as from the tuber, but man has used the tuber for planting so long that it has given up the effort to produce seed and uses all its energy to produce tubers. Very rarely do we now see a seed ball. Many people have never seen one, and are skeptical when they are told that potatoes produce fruit as well as tubers.

Another plant of the same family very popular everywhere as a food is the tomato. Less than a hundred years ago it was considered poisonous and raised as an ornamental plant for its red and yellow fruits. Its use as a food was probably accidental. I have thought it may have been that some hungry youngsters in playing with the fruit tried eating them, and no ill effects following the rest of the family began using the fruit as an article of diet.

While it is true that the juice of the leaves and stalks of this family of plants is acrid and slightly poisonous it is doubtful if any of the fruits of any of them are harmful. Still others of this same family are the egg-plant and the peppers. The former is a native of Asia and the latter of Mexico and South America. The husk tomato or ground cherry of which there are eighteen or twenty varieties and common in our fields is now being improved in size and flavor and may eventually become another member of the Solanums, whose fruits will grace our tables.

Among our shrubs and flowers are other members of the group. The black night shade, from which the drug, bella donna, is produced, has always been considered poisonous, but several years ago some plant breeder improved the fruit and it was put on the market but never became popular.

The Jerusalem cherry, much used as an ornamental pot plant and the bittersweet, a woody vine whose fruit for winter ornament is so much in demand that it is likely to become extinct, belong to this same genus.

Then there are numerous noxious weeds that claim relationship to these more or less useful plants. The Buffalo Bur seems to me to be the worst pest of the many. It is beset with thorns on the stem, on both sides of the leaves, and even on the yellow hundred seeded fruit. It is an interloper from the west and was in its native haunts the food of the Colorado potato beetle, till the pioneers introduced the potato to these beetles. They then seemingly left it severely alone and took to the more edible potato leaf. I don't blame them.

Allied to the Solanums is the tobacco plant, another purely American product. At the time of the discovery of America, the custom of smoking, of snuff taking, or chewing tobacco was diffused over the greater part of North and South America.

Pipes, in great numbers and wonderful workmanship discovered in mounds and tombs are evidence of tobacco's ancient usage.

The Jamestown settlers introduced another pest of this family to which they gave the name of Jimson weed or Jamestownweed. There are two varieties of this weed, whose scientific name is Datura. One has white flowers and light green leaves and stems, and was probably introduced from Asia. The other variety with purple stems and violet tinged tubular flowers is naturalized from tropical America.

To balance the introduction of noxious plants, South America sends us the showy Petunia, often called the poor man's flower as it will grow and reproduce itself under very adverse conditions and in any type of soil.

Since these many varieties resemble each other in flower or fruit, they must of had a common ancestor in the dim dark ages of the far distant past. How some became useful as human food and others a pest is a mystery. It reminds me of the little school girl's composition in which she said: "They say that both men and women sprang from monkeys, but I think women sprang farthest."

It may be that plants are like the human family, in that some are amenable to training into usefulness and others with all the influence that may be brought to bear on them for good are still weeds that cumber the ground.

One long table was arranged to seat the senior and high school faculty, the others finding places at small tables. The class colors, black and white, were skillfully combined in the effective decorating and the big room was fragrant with bouquets of lilacs, iris, tulips and other seasonal flowers.

Presiding over the meeting was the president of the Alumni Association, Mrs. Helen Griffith. Election of officers for next year resulted with Mrs. Murrell Yeoman as president; Harry Davis, vice president; Miss Mary Withgott, secretary and Miss Louise Vincent, treasurer.

Ruling Of Court Places Miami U. In Predicament

COLUMBUS, O.,—Although regarding with a certain amount of distaste the court ruling that authorities of a state supported school have no right to dismiss a student for poor scholarship, educational leaders of Ohio are prone to belittle the possible effects of the decision, a survey by International News Service revealed.

Faculty members at Ohio State University here contend that the ruling, which was handed down by Judge J. D. Barnes of Sidney, in the case of Miss Jean West, 19-year-old Miami University freshman, will not have a blanket effect.

Should similar cases arise, they believe, each will have to be taken to court individually.

Judge Barnes' in writing his decision on the case, in which Miss West protested her dismissal from Miami University because of failure to attain a certain specified scholarship standing, brought up the question:

"In short, can the university, through the adoption of bylaws and regulations, decree that the plaintiff cannot go to school?"

Authorities are in accord, Judge Barnes wrote, that schools supported by the state do have a right to expel or drop students for immorality, insubordination, failure to observe reasonable rules and regulations of conduct and other like infractions, "but, nowhere are we able to find any decided case giving the right to school authorities to drop a student for failure to come up to scholastic requirements."

Commenting upon this phase of the question involved, Dr. J. O. Engleman, president of Kent State College at Kent, declared that Judge Barnes' decision seems to deny the right of a college to make and enforce rules concerning the scholarship standards that must be attained by students to continue in college.

In Judge Barnes' opinion "the unquestioned right" which the faculty has to refuse promotion or graduation, or even demote them to a lower class or require the re-taking of the year's work, "has always seemed a sufficient disciplinary action."

And, in favoring Miss West in her suit against the university, the judge pointed out that the university authorities have the prerogative to compel her to remain in the same grade until her scholastic work merits promotion.

Bringing up the subject of the right of the "mentally slow" to attend school, Judge Barnes asked: "If such an individual can withstand the humiliation of failure in class, low grades in examination, failure to pass, taking their work a second year, and yet, have the laudable desire to go to school, why should he be denied?"

Only the state legislature has the "unquestioned right" to make provision for dropping and expelling students for failure in scholastic attainments, Judge Barnes opined.

Miss West filed her suit, through her father, William West, city plumbing inspector at Portsmouth, in common pleas court at Hamilton. It was contended that Miami University, which attempted to dismiss the girl from the institution because of poor grades, had no right to do so when the student has paid the required entrance fee.

Following Judge Barnes' ruling officials of Miami University indicated they would appeal the case to a higher court.

Some educational leaders expressed the belief that differences in the characters of Miami University and other state institutions may have a bearing upon the result of Judge Barnes' decision on other schools should similar cases arise.

For the most part, however, the consensus of opinion was that the ruling will have no serious effect whatsoever.
